Medical Insurance, Flex Plans and Homœopathy

Unfortunately for anyone who budgets their health care based on the cost of health insurance, there is not one single insurance company doing business in the state of North Carolina that will reimburse for homœopathy. As an unlicensed practitioner, there is nothing I can do about this. It is not my choice to take or not take insurance. The companies simply will not cover what I do.

Insurance companies generally require a medical diagnosis before they will cover treatment through your medical insurance or through a health savings plan (flex plan).

As an unlicensed practitioner, I am not allowed to give a medical diagnosis. If your insurance company wants a code before they'll pay for treatment or let you use your flex plan, what they're asking for is a diagnostic code. It is illegal for me to give anyone a diagnostic code for any of the services I offer. Even if I could provide a diagnostic code, I would still need a medical license number to go with that code ... and I don't have a medical license number.

All this is to say that there is no way I can get around these rules. Not infrequently, people ask me to try. This is tantamount to asking me to break the law and risk losing my practice. There is just barely room left in the state medical-practice laws for me to do what I do, and I would prefer not to jeopardize that.

If you have a health savings plan, and you would like to use your plan's Visa card to pay for my services, I am happy to try swiping your card. If it works, great. If your insurance company contacts you later asking for documentation, please do not contact me asking for diagnostic codes! You will simply have to tell your insurance provider that you saw an unlicensed practitioner and that you only have the receipt that was provided when you paid.

Thank you for your understanding!
